STERLING HEIGHTS MAN WINS FILMMAKING AWARD

Lansing, MI (March 31, 2006) – Ian Busch, originally of Sterling Heights, recently won an award for his filmmaking efforts.

Busch's short film, "Dead Inside," received an "Recognition of Excellence in Screenplay" award and 10th place out of 60 short science fiction films entered in the dvxuser.com film festival Sci-Fest. "Dead Inside" tells the story of an isolated, anti-social man who struggles with his loneliness and uses technology to overcome his depression. It can be viewed online at www.ianbusch.com.

Busch does video editing and production work at Message Makers, a Michigan firm specializing in video/media production, event production, instructional design, and video and event equipment rental.
